Letters to the Younger Self

To the Boy who dreamed countlessly and endlessly... to be a dancer, or an actor

Dear Meo,

Letter # 01 (1984)

Never forget what Daddy told you. Money doesn't grow on trees. You will be a provider in the future. Choose a career, not that will make you happy, but that will make people around you happier.

Sincerely, Romeo

*from Philam Life,
UN Avenue
to BBC, London*

Dear Meo,

Letter # 02 (1989)

Now that you are a young FASP, don't think that the struggles are over. Be more grateful to those who made it harder for you. These are the better lessons you need in the future.

There are no shortcuts. Work harder than ever.

Sincerely, Romeo

To the Expat in Indonesia...

To the Expat in Vietnam...

To the Expat in Hong Kong...

Dear Meo,

Letter # 03 (1996)

Will you accept that promotion to VP or will you go to an unknown country? Face that fear of the unknown as it will lead you to even greater adventures. Financial rewards awaits you. But brace yourself to bouts of homesickness.

Sincerely, Romeo

To the Prodigal Son...

...and the one feeling young again

Dear Meo,

Letter # 04 (2009)

Twelve years you've been away. There is a bigger adventure - coming back home, to family, to enduring friendships, to your real self. Reroute. Re-root. Pay cut. More taxes. Greater happiness.

Sincerely, Romeo

To the new CEO...

Dear Meo,

Letter # 05 (2018)

Now, what?

Retirement?

Sincerely, Romeo

If symptoms persist,
consult your actuary.
